

VIDEOGAMES II

New generations have grown up in touch with computer games. They are entertaining and exciting. There are lots of kinds of games in existence, but are all of them convenient?

The most famous ones among teenagers are action games. They enjoy the feeling of being a soldier or a fugitive, aiming a gun, taking part in a robbery... Moreover, they can play against their friends as well as people all over the world.

However, some children become too involved in these games. They spend too much time playing on the computer and the violence and aggressiveness they show can have bad effects on them.

So, in my view, some games should be banned because of their contents and parents ought to control the games their children play with.
